Gearing up for Day of Giving

Glenville State University will celebrate its 152nd anniversary on Monday, February 19. That date coincides with the annual Founders Day of Giving campaign. The giving campaign focuses on raising money for areas of need on campus such as academics, athletics, scholarships, campus improvements, and more.

"First off, I have to say thank you to our donors and friends," said David Hutchison, Vice President of Advancement. "These past few years have been record-breaking and that is all thanks to our supporters. I encourage everyone to keep an eye out for our fundraising projects and participate as you are able. And remember, each gift – no matter the size – makes an impact and helps bring us closer to our goals."

Hutchison notes that the Morris Family Foundation has a generous $500,000 match in place for the Founders Day of Giving again this year. Once $500,000 has been raised, the match is unlocked.

Fundraising projects have been established for each academic department and athletic team, scholarship funds, and other specific projects.

The Day of Giving website – give.glenville.edu – opens on February 12.

State means to him, Kevin said, “Glenville is not just my alma mater; it is a fundamental part of my identity, shaping who I am personally and professionally. I am forever grateful for the experiences, education, and connections Glenville State University provided. As an alum, I proudly carry the distinction of being associated with Glenville, an institution that means everything to me. I tell my wife all the time that I bleed blue.”

He adds, “During my three years at Glenville, I had the privilege of pursuing my passion for basketball under the guidance of influential coaches Stephen Dye and Joe Mazzulla. Their mentorship played a pivotal role in shaping my basketball career and inspired the founding of my business, 1Up Stats, where I aim to pass on the knowledge and discipline instilled in me to the next generation. I want to help others like everyone who has helped me along my journey.”

We are pleased to feature Kevin in this month’s Alumni Spotlight and are proud to call him an alumnus.

Deferred Maintenance Funding to Facilitate Upgrades, Changes at GSU

Last year, it was announced that Glenville State University would receive nearly $12 million in deferred maintenance funding from the State of West Virginia. Deferred maintenance projects have piled up at institutions all around the state over the past decade due to decreased appropriations. This funding will allow state universities to tackle many long-overdue projects.

At Glenville State, the funding will go toward heating and cooling system controls and upgrades throughout campus, security camera and exterior lighting replacement and installation, and technology upgrades such as new Wi-Fi hotspots and a server replacement. The monies will also be used to upgrade and expand usage of the campus amphitheater and to facilitate partial demolition of Louis Bennett Hall.

Architectural and engineering contracts have been completed for the building projects and the campus Physical Plant and Office of Technology employees are gearing up for the upgrades. The funding is being dispersed in 25% increments and Glenville State received its first $2.9 million in December 2023.

Tvaris "T" King '16 has become the go-to tattoo artist for many Ohio State University student athletes and other professional athletes – and the wall of his shop proves it. The interior of his Tattoo Kings shop in Columbus, Ohio is lined with photos of satisfied customers who proudly sport his artwork.

"They are allowing me to leave my mark on them, they're entrusting me with doing this for them. I don't think I could ever take it for granted. It's a constant appreciation," King said in an interview with The Lantern, OSU's student newspaper.

King says that he first was exposed to art as a child watching his mother paint, but it wasn't until years later that a friend asked him to use his artistic skills for a tattoo.

Wrestling Nabs MEC Championship, Boxing Picks up Two Wins

Glenville State has claimed the 2024 Mountain East Conference Wrestling Championship and two Pioneer boxers were victorious at the War in the Waco VIII.

The Pioneers dethroned reigning MEC wrestling champs West Liberty at the tournament that was held in late January. Five GSU wrestlers took home individual championships in their weight classes: Hunter Ross (125), Gavin Quioco (133), Guy DeLeonardis (157), Brady Ross (165), and Isaiha Casto (174). The win marks Glenville State's first MEC Championship in wrestling since the program relaunched during the 2020-21 season.

At the War in the Waco, GSU senior Daniel Hinger fought back in his final round to defeat Leo Cuellar in one of the most exciting fights of the night. Sophomore Payton Packer's was the final fight of the evening; he picked up the win by unanimous decision. The War in the Waco featured seven fights with four Pioneers competing.

Bob “Skinny” Minnieweather Scholarship

Bob “Skinny” Minnieweather '67 came to Glenville State in the fall of 1963 with his friend Sammy Burns to play basketball. He would compete in both basketball and track, and held the Pioneer rebounding record for some 35 years.

Being the first persons of color on GSC’s campus, Bob and Sammy paved the way for the likes of Hall of Famer Jackie Joe Robinson '70, Marion Gordon '70, Willie McGee, Bill Perry, and Roosevelt Lynch to find their way to campus in the 1960s. This ushered in Glenville State teams that won the WVIAC Conference and went on to Kansas City in both 1970 and 1972; these teams included greats such as Hall of Famer Steve Datcher '73, Hall of Famer Earl Hawkins '74, Hall of Famer Ron Jones '73, Ken Ledbetter '73, and other black student athletes of that era.

Bob earned the prestigious Frank Montrose Award in 1967. Following graduation, he served as a counselor at the Job Corps Center before joining the U.S. Army and serving on active duty in the Vietnam War. He enrolled in the Sears Roebuck Managerial School in 1972 and continued with the company as a credit service manager in several locations. Bob was active in the Baptist church where he taught Sunday School, served on the Usher’s Board, and was a member of the brotherhood.

Minnieweather was an inaugural (posthumous) inductee into Glenville State’s Curtis Elam Athletic Hall of Fame in May 2001.

The Bob “Skinny” Minnieweather Scholarship was first established by African American alumni from the 60s and 70s. Created in Bob’s memory, it is designed to provide financial support for African American students enrolled at Glenville State.
